

A native of Caracas, Venezuela, Alvaro Buenrostro has been playing the violin since age 10 and has played with various community orchestras throughout the USA. Alvaro Buenrostro graduated from the University of Central Florida in 2008 with dual mechanical and aerospace engineering degrees. During his attendance at UCF, he played with the UCF Symphony Orchestra, the UCF Chamber Orchestra and studied under the instruction of Dr. Ayako Yonetani, the resident violin instructor at UCF. Alvaro has played with community orchestras such as the Philharmonic of Southern New Jersey, The Delaware Valley Philharmonic Orchestra, The Lancaster Symphony Orchestra, and is currently playing his 6th season with the Tampa Bay Symphony Orchestra. Outside of music, Alvaro works as a Manufacturing Manager at Department of Defense contractor, Lockheed Martin, where he manages numerous hardware production projects. In addition, Alvaro is a runner and triathlete (swim, bike, run) and enjoys friendly competition at local races.
