

Laurie Fox

Laurie played the violin from elementary school through college. In high school, Laurie traveled with the Long Island Youth Orchestra performing internationally from China, Japan & Hong Kong, to the Netherlands, to Spain, Portugal and Morocco. After graduating college, “life got in the way”, and Laurie put her violin on hold for career and family. Over 30 years later (it’s never too late!), Laurie picked up the violin once again in 2017, after her two children went off to college. Laurie auditioned for the Tampa Bay Symphony a few months later, and was thrilled to be accepted into the second violin section. Laurie is also a violinist in the Suncoast Symphony Orchestra and Dade City Symphony, and performs with string ensembles in the Tampa Bay area.

Originally from Long Island NY, Laurie relocated to Tampa with PricewaterhouseCoopers in 2003. Still with PwC, Laurie is a Senior Manager on the National Benefits team, specializing in benefit systems.

Laurie is a passionate supporter of youth education, and is currently a Junior Achievement volunteer and national judge for the InvestWrites program. Laurie is also a member of the Tampa Bay Symphony Board of Directors, and serves as the TBS webmaster.
